Academic Conquest - V – Answer Key

Q.1 (A)

- (1) Voltaire was the founder of modern historiography.
- (2) The arts of painting and sculpting are visual arts.
- (3) The first English newspaper in India was started by James Augustus Hickey.
- (4) The earliest museum in the world was discovered in the excavations at the city of Ur.

Q.1 (B)

- (1) Wrong pair: Chhatrapati Shivaji Maharaj Railway Terminus – Delhi. Correction: Chhatrapati Shivaji Maharaj Railway Terminus – Mumbai.
- (2) Wrong pair: ‘Prabhakar’ – Acharya P. K. Atre. Correction: ‘Prabhakar’ – Bhau Mahajan (Acharya P. K. Atre is associated with the newspaper ‘Maratha’).

Q.2 (Any four)

- (1) Dialectics – A method of analysis based on opposites, proposed by Hegel. A theory (Thesis) is proposed, then a contrary theory (Antithesis); a thorough logical discussion of both leads to a new thesis (Synthesis) that includes the gist of both.
- (2) Annales School – A school of historiography that arose in France at the onset of the twentieth century. It held that history is not only about political events, kings and wars, but also about climate, local people, agriculture, trade, technology, means of communication and social psychology.
- (3) Applied Art – An artistic creation combined with utility value to make it economically viable is called applied art, e.g. industry and advertisement, interior design, production of ornamental objects, and design of stage backdrops.
- (4) Nationalistic Historiography – A tradition of Indian historiography in which writers presented history from a nationalistic perspective, glorifying India’s past and inspiring national pride during the freedom struggle.
- (5) Hemadpanti style – A style of temple architecture named after Hemadpant, minister of the Yadava kings, characterised by the use of interlocking stones without mortar, commonly found in Maharashtra.

Q.3 (Any two)

- (1) Foucault called his method ‘the archaeology of knowledge’ because he believed history should not simply be arranged in chronological order to reach an ultimate truth, but should explain the various transitions in the past – much like an archaeologist uncovers layers of the past.
- (2) It is necessary to preserve traditions like Chitrakathi because such folk art forms, which have been handed down for generations, are on the verge of extinction, and losing them would mean losing a valuable part of our cultural heritage.
- (3) Information received through mass media needs to be reviewed critically because mass media can sometimes carry biased, exaggerated or inaccurate information, and only a critical, historically-informed reading helps separate fact from opinion or propaganda.

Q.4 (Any two)

- (1) Feminist historiography means restructuring history from the perspective of women. It emphasised the inclusion of women in history and the rethinking of the male-dominated perspective, focusing on women’s employment, their role in trade unions, institutions working for their cause and their family life.

(2) Svatantryaveer Savarkar contributed significantly to nationalistic historiography; his writings, such as 'The Indian War of Independence 1857', presented historical events from a nationalistic viewpoint and inspired the freedom struggle.

(3) Newspapers aim to inform readers about current events, educate and create awareness among the public, express and shape public opinion, and (historically) played a key role in mobilising people during the freedom struggle.

Q.5

Cultural Heritage → Tangible Heritage (monuments, artefacts, sites) and Intangible Heritage (traditions, performing arts, oral literature, folklore, festivals).

Q.6 (Any two)

(1) According to Karl Marx, history is not about abstract ideas but about living people. Human relationships are shaped by fundamental needs and by the ownership and nature of the means of production. Since access to these means is unequal, society gets divided into classes, leading to class struggle – the exploiting class (owners of production) versus the exploited class. Marx held that human history is essentially the history of this class struggle, a view he elaborated in 'Das Kapital'.

(2) Islamic architecture in India is characterised by the use of domes, minarets, arches and calligraphy instead of figurative sculpture. Examples include the Qutub Minar (Mehrauli, Delhi), Gol Gumbaz (Vijapur/Bijapur), and the Taj Mahal (Agra), which showcase these features along with symmetrical layouts and the use of marble and red sandstone.

(3) Since Akashvani (All India Radio) broadcasts a range of programmes including historical, cultural and awareness-creating content, knowledge of history helps in planning accurate, well-researched and engaging programmes on India's past for a wide audience, including special programmes for farmers, workers, youth and women.
